

DOAN TRAN

Doan was born in Boston, Massachusetts and raised in Dorchester (Boston) and Quincy, Massachusetts by immigrant parents from Vietnam. Growing up surrounded by a plethora of cultures, Doan values the importance of storytelling. In 2018, Doan was nominated as an Ambassador for her hometown for Project 351, a non-profit organization in Boston dedicated to empowering Massachusetts' youth through civic engagement and service learning. With Project 351, Doan served on the Alumni Leadership Council to mentor eighth grade Ambassadors and served as a Playbook Trainer in partnership with the Boston Celtics Community Engagement team to deliver a diversity, equity, inclusion, and justice curriculum to middle school students across the state. Inspired by her time with Project 351, Doan actively makes community engagement and civic learning a part of her life through participation in organizations such as Invest in Girls, Special Olympics, Amnesty International, Prison Books, and a few other local non-profits. Doan attended Milton Academy on scholarship and graduated spring of 2022; she is now taking a gap year to travel and volunteer. She will be attending the University of Chicago as a first-year undergraduate student next fall (2023) with an intended major in Public Policy.
